Our way of working together defines who we are

What connects us:

- We treat each other with respect and fairness – every opinion counts.
- We build on trust – in our work, in our colleagues, and in our shared goals.
- We take responsibility for how we act and how we communicate.
- We work pragmatically and with commitment, always looking for solutions.
- We know: Our strength lies in cooperation, not in hierarchy.

Who we are:
The ALPLA Identity

ALPLA INDUSTRIAL

What this means for our workshop

- Listen first. Take colleagues' input seriously.
- Give feedback respectfully – focus on solutions, not blame.
- Share information proactively – don't wait to be asked.
- Support each other across countries and teams.
- Follow up – commitment means doing what we said we'll do.

Our shared goal

We all work toward the same outcome:

How great collaboration looks like

Open, respectful communication – clear, direct, and well-prepared.

Mutual reliability – once we agree on something, we can count on each other.

Strong personal relationships across Austria, Hungary, and Romania make collaboration easier.

Shared goals and transparency help us coordinate better and avoid misunderstandings.

Regular exchange of accurate market and customer information strengthens our teamwork.

Customers/Market Segments Growth Potential

Pet food and alternative food markets

Strategic key accounts in construction (e.g. major paint producers such as KOBER) remain important

New business in the food segment with regional producers (e.g. Hügli, Danone, etc.) can help diversify our portfolio.

We need to identify and develop new market niches beyond construction to balance our customer mix.

Any final thoughts or ideas to help us succeed together? Gibt es abschließende Gedanken oder Ideen, die uns helfen, gemeinsam erfolgreich zu sein?

My main thought is to help by creating focus and discipline in sales—clear priorities, clear value messaging, and predictable execution.

work together on ideas and solutions

At ALPLAindustrial, we must be partners, not competitors.

One Team, one common goal!

Sales 2026

ALPLA INDUSTRIAL

What we heard from within the organization

"We're known as a reliable partner in construction — but we need to become more than that if we want to grow in food packaging."

"Right now, competition is purely on price — the only way forward is to build trust, digital visibility, and true partnerships."

"We rely too much on individuals; we need a structure that outlasts people."

"ALPLA Industrial is technically strong and trusted — but still too small in scale. We need to play in the top league of Key Accounts."

"We talk about collaboration, but our communication is still broken — no follow-up, no structure, and no ownership."

"Our future differentiation won't come from product variety, but from sustainability, reliability, and design competence."

"Without structure, even good ideas get lost — we need clear processes, shared knowledge, and real follow-through."

"Our biggest challenge is efficiency — too many systems, too many manual steps, not enough standardization."

ALPLA INDUSTRIAL

From listening to action: Why we are rethinking our sales organization

How the market is changing

- Key customers are centralizing their purchasing and expect one coordinated partner.
- Price pressure is increasing across all markets.
- Smaller and mid-sized customers expect more advice and service, not only products.
- Digital, data-driven decisions are becoming the new standard.

Where we stand today

- ALPLA Industrial has grown from different structural origins, with – three production sites
  – different systems, pricing logics and ways of managing customers.
- This decentralized, trust-based way of working created strong customer proximity – but also limited transparency, inefficient use of resources, and little shared learning.

Our response: building one integrated, transparent and learning-oriented sales system for the future.

Objective of the Project

The transformation aims to create a clear, coherent, and scalable sales organization that:

1. Addresses the market holistically (across sites, customer segments, and countries);
2. Defines clear roles, responsibilities, and decision-making pathways;
3. Establishes governance and performance structures that replace trust-based systems with transparency-based systems;
4. Introduces learning and feedback mechanisms so that sales experience can be systematically shared and developed further;
5. Builds incentive and target systems that connect individual accountability with collective success.

ALPLA INDUSTRIAL

How we will work together in the new sales model

Central Leadership, Clear Direction

- We will work together in a central Sales Hub
- We will unite our market strategy, pricing, KAM, and reporting in the Hub.
- We follow decisions with clear rules for escalation and responsibilities.

Local Presence, Strong Customer Connection

- Our Local Customer Service teams provide the daily contact for customers.
- We will work within unified frameworks (e.g. price ranges, quotation processes).
- We keep personal contact local, while steering and priorities are centralized.

ALPLA INDUSTRIAL

How we will work together in the new sales model

Segment Logic Instead of Plant Logic

- Customers are grouped by relevance, service needs, and market segment – not by plant.
- Our sales resources go where customer value and strategic impact are highest.

Transparency, Learning and Feedback

- Common data and reporting routines make information and performance visible to everyone.
- Good examples, learnings and successes are shared across all our teams

Cooperative Leadership Culture

- Leadership means enabling colleagues, not controlling them.
- Goals and responsibilities are shared, and results are achieved together.

Leadership Principles of the New Organization

1. Clarity of Responsibility – Every decision is assigned to a specific role, process, and data point.
2. Commitment through Governance – Structured processes and defined accountabilities replace ad-hoc arrangements.
3. Transparency of Performance – Reporting and feedback make progress, impact, and learning opportunities visible.
4. Trust as a Foundational Mindset – Structure protects trust but does not replace it.
5. Learning as a Leadership Task – Leaders ensure reflection and knowledge sharing within their teams.
